Subject: Tractor Trailer filled with ignitable in Salamanca NY

Mike: This is what I was mentioning to you earlier: Additional information to follow. Owner of a defunct furniture finishing company lost his lease on his business location and therefore had vacate the premises and had to find a place to store his chemical stripping agents. He subsequently obtained a truck and stored hundreds of containers or various sizes from 1 gallon to 55 gallon drums with this material (suspected to be Toluene and MEK, lacquers) CID, Buffalo (Zack Zittle at the request of the DEC investigated the site and along with our DESA people (Hale, Morrell) conducted an investigation into the suspected illegal disposal or abandonment of these hazardous materials. The PRP has no funding to properly dispose of this materials and has been very cooperative with us, and there doesn't appear to be a problem with access.

I have a call into Zittle who should call me back latter today. I don't have the phone number of the PRP Doug Zolner, i receive that from Zittle.

Here is the other contact info that I have thus far:
